The cream of culinary training

New Zealand Apprenticeship in Cookery

What makes this so special? This is an elite cookery programme where trainee chefs become qualified experts by training on-the-job – developing their culinary skills and knowledge, and continually creating, refining and perfecting their art to the highest standard. It's the way many of the world's best chefs make their mark, because you can't beat the true learning experience of creating great food in a high pressure commercial kitchen for real, paying customers.

It is designed by industry to give talented young chefs the right knowledge and expertise they need in commercial kitchens in restaurants and hotels.

The New Zealand Apprenticeship in Cookery is the only qualification programme of its kind in the country.

It is easily delivered to your staff, on-job, and at a pace that works for your business – the perfect recipe for smart employers who want the benefit of smart people who can rise to the top.

Programme Snapshot

With a New Zealand Apprenticeship in Cookery, your talented staff will gain the professional skills, knowledge and confidence they need to impress customers in a top quality hotel or restaurant. They'll learn how to cook classic and highly complex dishes to perfection and plate them in style. From delicious amuse-bouche, breads, entrées, mains and sides to delicate desserts, cakes, and pastries.

They'll also learn, and be assessed by industry, for their commercial competence – the vital ingredient they need to work effectively in a commercial kitchen.

How the programme works

The programme involves training on-job.

Your chef or supervisor trains your apprentice on-job and measures how well they are learning what they need to know. It's a time proven method that allows your apprentice to master new skills by applying them continually as they work.

A training plan outlines the skills your apprentice needs to learn, and when they need to learn them by. There is also a comprehensive series of cookery learning material to help them master the theory and new ways of doing things.

Your apprentice and chef, or supervisor, are supported by a ServiceIQ Assessor who monitors the training and progress, and carries out practical assessments of your apprentice's skills in your workplace. Or you have the option to upskill your apprentice by training one of your team to be your own in-house assessor.

Strong support all the way

Your ServiceIQ Sector Advisor signs your apprentice on and mentors their progress throughout the programme. It includes quarterly visits with you and your apprentice to discuss their progress, set goals, and complete assessments.

Many modules can be self-taught using the supplied resources and computer-based learning.

Commercial Competence Assessment

The difference between being a great cook and a great chef running a successful restaurant kitchen is the ability to think on your feet, improvise and expertly plate a wide array of top quality dishes on time, regardless of pressure. To make sure your apprentice has that kind of savvy, their commercial competence will be assessed in the middle and at the end of the programme.

How long is the programme?

Apprentices are encouraged to work at their own pace, around you and your business. The completion time is 30–36 months.

CASE STUDY: Sure to rise – Culinary star in her greatest job yet

Landing a role as Sous Chef at Josh Emmett's acclaimed Madame Woo restaurant in Auckland is the latest step up in an exciting tour of work that has taken Tamara Johnson, ServiceIQ Apprentice Chef of the Year 2013, all the way from St Heliers Bay Café & Bistro, to Florida's Hyatt Regency Hotel, and Food Co-ordinator on popular TV shows 'My Kitchen Rules' and 'Masterchef'.

"Each job has had exciting aspects such as good pay, cooking for famous people and working with colleagues that are almost as passionate for food as I am," says Tamara. "But my current job is the most exciting since graduating from my ServiceIQ Cooking Apprenticeship (in 2013)."

The ambitious young chef's career is taking shape thanks to the superior skills and expertise she gained on-the-job at the start of her great adventure.

"It has given me an advantage over someone who has walked fresh out of a cooking school. I would say that a chef is more likely to hire you based on your experience level in the kitchen over years in a classroom," she says.
